The following presentation is a collection of photographs taken over the past seventeen years. They include many of the waterfowl, raptors, birds and visitors that stop at Silver Lake while using the Eastern migratory flyway during their Spring and fall migration. While not all species visit the lake every year, however, when they do come may stay anywhere from fifteen minutes to as much as one week before continuing on their flights. Not only does Silver Lake provide nourishment for many of these weary travelers, but it also serves as a resting place which gives lake residents a chance to observe nature as it happens.
